THE BASSANO MAIL, THURSDAY, SEPT. 15, 1932

Wheat . . .

United States 1932 wheat crop (estimated), 773 million bushels; 1933 wheat crop 589 million bushels.

Average estimate of Canadian 1932 wheat on part of three leading U. S. A. crop estimators is 425 million bushels.

Bearie Grain Co. estimates Alberta's crop at 180 million bushels, or the largest the province has ever raised. The same company estimates western Canada's crop at 459 million bushels.

The announcement was made by the attorney general of Alberta that crop payment shares on mortgages upon farm properties in this province will be on the basis of one-fourth the crop instead of one-third for the present season.

Basketweaver Pool Elevator system now includes 1068 country houses with a capacity of 35 million bushels. Three country elevators were added this year, and one was dismantled.

The port of Vancouver shipped 54,524,698 bushels of wheat during the year ending July 31, 1932, as compared with 74,167,653 bushels the previous year.

Winnipeg Press Press crop estimate issued September 7, 1932: western Canada wheat 426,513,000 from 26,396,000 acres; Alberta 168,150,000 from 2,201,000 acres.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14.—Bargained in a wave of late selling, wheat prices were swept back on the Winnipeg exchange today. After a long early premium all futures were knocked down 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents from yesterday's close. October bargained at 61 1/2, December 52 3/4, and May 57 3/4.

The greater part of selling came as a result of releasing of spreads between Chicago and Winnipeg markets and following a sharp decline at the former pit.

The market here previously had been encouraged by a heavy export business in Canadian wheat, of which more than 1,600,000 bushels had been shipped abroad. This figure made a total of nearly 5 million bushels during the past two days.

Hedging sales were heavy with reports showing more than 5 million bushels taken in country points yesterday.

Good demand for Canadian wheat continued at Liverpool, with local cables showing an advance of 2 1/2 to 3 to 1-2 per hundredweight.

BASSANO KEEPS TENNIS TROPHY

In strong finish Bassano Ties With Brooks to Hold Trophy—Five Postponed Matches With Glenelg Club Played Off Sunday.

Staging a remarkably strong finish in the five postponed matches played with the Glenelg club last Sunday afternoon, the Bassano Tennis Club won four of them and tied with Brooks. Bassano thus won the right to retain the Bow Valley tennis cup another twelve months.

Overtaken by darkness a week previous when the tournament between the two clubs was held Sunday and Labor Day, Brooks was leading by four points, with Glenelg and Bassano having five matches yet to play. To retain the cup by even a tie it was necessary for Bassano to win four out of the five matches. They did.

The summary of the tournament given 25 wins and 13 losses to Bassano; 25 wins and 13 losses to Brooks; and 7 wins and 13 losses to Glenelg.

Glenelg's only victory in the five matches last Sunday was that of Mr. Yates, who triumphed over L. Leonard, 6-4, 6-6.

The results of the other matches are as follows:

Mr. Newby and W. J. Redmond, Bassano, defeated Miss Brooks and W. J. Redmond, 6-4, 6-6.

Miss Scheer and Wm. McLaw, Bassano, defeated Miss Lewis and Cardinal, 6-4, 6-6, 6-4.

L. Whitehorn, Bassano, and G. Yates, Glenelg, had each won a set the week previous before being overtaken by darkness. In the third set Whitehorn won 6-1.

Miss Mary Cathro, Bassano, and Miss N. Downey, Glenelg, also each won a set the week previous, and Miss Cathro took the deciding set 6-4.

Considering the good form they displayed in later-week games earlier in the summer, Glenelg made a disappointing showing in the tournament. They should have won at least twice the number of points they actually got. The lady members of the Glenelg club were weak.

The Brooks club was particularly strong in men's singles, winning all but two matches in these events. They had been concentrating on men's singles, and they got good results.

The Brooks club made a weak showing in men's singles, winning only one match out of six against Brooks, and getting an even break with Glenelg. The Bassano lady players were particularly strong, making a clean sweep of every event they played in, including ladies' singles, ladies' doubles, and mixed doubles.

ARE THE BANKS TAKING TO HAMLET?

Restriction of credit by the banks, causing lower price levels and depression, was claimed by E. J. Garland, New River M. P., in his address to the Bassano Board of Trade on Wednesday.

Mr. Garland said the financial institutions of the world were at fault, and only a drastic restriction of the banking system could cure the world's troubles of today. "The banks," said the speaker, "are primarily to blame for the depression. They dominate the people and the government. They should be relegated to their proper position as servants of the people."

Such utterances may, by some people, be termed radical, but as the speaker pointed out, many leading economists of today are thinking and expressing themselves along the same lines, and Mr. Garland made a number of quotations to back up his statements.

Those who heard the address could not help being impressed with the paramount importance of the banking business today in relation to the prosperity of the world, nor could they doubt the sincerity of the speaker's belief that the banking system of today must give way to a new system if the world is to prosper.

Money, after all, is only a token. It only represents something which we can eat, wear, or use. There is no dearth of production of goods in the world, for man has learned how to produce, by the aid of machines, all that he requires. The struggle for food, shelter, and clothing should be at an end for man produce these things in almost endless quantity, sufficient for everybody. The difficulty lies in distributing the goods to the people. This is where money has failed. Its failure and a search for a solution of the problem of finance are occupying the most brilliant minds of today.

SUNDAY WORK

The farmer's income, subject as it is to the whims of the elements, is most uncertain from week to week, even from day to day, for a sudden storm or a severe frost may greatly reduce or even completely destroy the fruits of his year's labor.

But his crop is harvested and safely stored away in the bin or delivered to the elevator, he is at the mercy of the weather. To accomplish this in the shortest possible time he often works long hours during week days and Sunday to until the task is finished.

This practice of doing harvest work on Sunday is under criticism by the Kamnack, Saskatchewan, Presbytery of the United Church of Canada. They strongly object to it and point out that in working on Sunday the farmer is violating the Lord's Day Alliance Act.

While the practice of Sunday work should not be encouraged, the farmer may be excused for doing harvest work on the Sabbath. The harvest season is so short, there is so much to be accomplished, and the risks of delay are so great in some sections of the country that Sunday work in the harvest field is justified.

We cannot conceive of a beneficent Providence frowning on a hardy son of the soil for gathering in on the Sabbath that which he has worked a whole year to produce by the aid of that same Providence, that which will mean food, shelter, and clothing for his wife and children, that which may be destroyed by a violent hailstorm or severe frost should he delay as much as one day in caring for it.

LUCKY FLYERS

The members of the Hutchinson air expedition, known as the "flying family," may be considered the luckiest people today.

Forced down along the coast of Greenland on their trans-Atlantic flight, they narrowly escaped being killed after two days' search they were found when hope for their safety had almost been abandoned.

The presence of a mother and her two young children in the expedition aroused the deepest sympathy throughout the world when it was believed the "flying family" had perished. Taking them along as members of the expedition was a foolhardy thing. The flight, under the best conditions, was extremely dangerous, and to expose mother and children to such dangers was reckless bravado.

They will be able to remain home in future.

JAPAN PROTESTS U. S. IS PREPARING FOR WAR

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—The storm of protest which has developed during the last two days over the photographing of a number of Japanese business and industrial buildings by the National City Bank of New York assumed a more serious aspect Saturday and led to diplomatic action.

Delegations from several Japanese patriotic societies visited the headquarters of the bank at Osaka and attempted to intimidate the Japanese employees.

Osaka newspapers came out again with full page devoted to protest against the photographing and printed a number of other reports to hint the United States was making other preparations for possible war.

The newspaper charges, which included a long list of activities, such as the presence of the United States fleet in the Pacific, an alleged cruise of three airplane carriers along the Kurile Islands and establishment of new air bases on the Aleutian Islands, also were broadcast over the semi-official station at Osaka. The charges that the bank's photographs might get into the hands of the United States War department for use in mapping targets for air bombing raids was reiterated.

It also published prominently a report that Americans were sending machine bombing planes to Hangchow, China, to assist the Chinese army in establishing an air base.

CANADIAN WHEAT CROP ESTIMATED AT 467,150,000 BUS.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—The wheat crop of all Canada is estimated at 467,150,000 bushels by the Canadian Bureau of Statistics in its crop report handed out on Saturday.

Last year the total wheat crop was 394,144,000 bushels.

The bureau estimates the total crop of oats at 422,539,000 bushels, barley 83,650,000 bushels, rye 12,725,000 bushels, and flax seed 3,129,000 bushels.

The wheat crop of the three prairie provinces is forecast at 446,000,000 bushels, compared with 384,000,000 in 1931. Compared with last year's crop, a much higher yield is expected.

The eye and oat crops in Saskatchewan, Alberta again has the highest yield per acre. The yield per acre for the entire wheat is nearly 17 bushels, which is somewhat greater than the long-time average.

SAVS RUSSIAN EXPORT WHEAT TO DISAPPEAR

LETHBRIDGE, Sept. 16.—As the years go on Russia's exports of wheat will become less despite great increases in production, predicted Dr. N. J. Vavilov, director of the Institute of Plant Industry of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, here today.

Dr. Vavilov was a delegate to the recent conference on genetics at Ithaca, N. Y., and is making a hurried study of agriculture in western Canada.

Increasing quantities of Russian foodstuffs will be consumed at home, he said, as the government plans for raising the standard of living of the people comes into effect.

The eye and oat crops in Russia this year will be better than the average, said Dr. Vavilov, but the spring wheat crop would be only fair.

"Your Canadian wheat farmers," he said, "produce primarily for export. We in Russia have never yet produced enough cereals to supply the home market. We have not exported a surplus. We have never had a surplus to export. What has been shipped to the other side, before the war, from large capitalist farms which sought the higher prices in the world market and disregarded the Russian demand or, since the revolution, by the state which was forced to export in order to import industrial supplies."

MANY KILLED WHEN TRAIN WRECKED BY BANDITS IN CHINA

MANCHU, China, Sept. 11.—More than 100 persons were reported killed in a disastrous train wreck when the regular Changchun-Harbin train which left here at 8:34 p.m. yesterday was derailed 60 miles from Harbin.

Among the passengers was Henry Richard, Villard, son of Oswald Garrison Villard, publisher of the Washington Post. No report has yet received here regarding his safety.

Authorities rushing to the train wrecked a section of the rails had been removed, presumably by bandits. The accident is believed to be the worst in the history of the railway. Harbin is now cut off from the west, east, and north.

PROTEST IS MADE ON SUNDAY WORK

WADEN, Sask., Sept. 11.—Re-affirming its stand on the observance of the Sabbath the social committee of the Kamnack Presbytery of the United Church of Canada at a meeting here recently voiced strong criticism of farmers regarding the harvesting on Sundays in the northern areas of Saskatchewan.

It was claimed that the Lord's Day Alliance act was being totally disregarded in some districts, with trucks carrying merchandise, goods being sold and grain being drawn to elevators. The alleged transgression of the act will be brought to the attention of the attorney-general of Saskatchewan.

PARAGUAY CLAIMS VICTORY IN CHACO BATTLE

BRUNO, Paraguay, Sept. 12.—Paraguayans fought a three-day battle with Bolivians at Fort Boqueron in the Chaco region "completely annihilated" the 14th Bolivian infantry regiment. The alleged triumph was followed by further successes as the fierce battle continued, the government announced Monday.

The Bolivian commander, Major Adolfo Latorre, was taken prisoner, the official bulletin said, and bodies of several other high officers were identified on the battlefield.

"FLYING FAMILY" FEARED LOST OFF GREENLAND

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—A plane has been found off the Newfoundland coast, missing off the coast of eastern Greenland, it was reported in a radio message received here.

In a message to the radio branch department of marine, the R. S. N. P. McLean, commanding the cutter stationed in Hudson Strait, reported that search during the early morning hours by the British trawler "Lord Talbot," had been unsuccessful.

Amid the ice floes that snatched the plane, rescue vessels searched without much hope for its adults and two small girls—the "flying family" of George R. Hutchinson.

Their flight from New York toward Europe culminated yesterday in frantic S.O.S. calls—and then silence. Hutchinson reported his plane had been forced down off eastern Greenland on its way from the southern tip of Greenland. It is feared all eight perished in the icy water.

One morning she stopped him as he was leaving the hotel.

"Just down to the shop to get something, my dear," Henry replied.

"Are you?" she put in. "Well, just you stop here, and I'll go down and get it for you."

"With pleasure, my dear," smiled Henry. "I was going down to get a haircut and shave."

In his 35 years of practice and research, however, he realized that the weakening of man's glands was also responsible for other troubles: High blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, physical exhaustion after work or exercise, dizziness, depression, neurasthenia, etc.

All these troubles can be removed with Titus-Pearls. Numerous cases were treated by Dr. Hirschfeld in his Berlin Institute.

L. S. (State official; 60 years old, married) complained of physical exhaustion, dizziness and tremors. Was easily tired. Mental powers dull and slow moving. Physical powers had been incomplete for previous 5 years. Blood pressure too high. Given 2 Titus-Pearls 3 times a day. 2 weeks later the medical report on this man was: General health better, more vigor; dizziness much less and returning of power. Treatment continued and 2 weeks later L. S. reported again, this time to say that all weaknesses and exhaustion had gone; he felt fresh and buoyant. His blood pressure had fallen, and at 60 years of age he had regained the physical power and vitality that he had known in the prime of his life.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: John Brown, 14 years old, who had spent all of his life about a fifteen-year-old boy, was playing near John's house, in a terrace which sinks the tide, drowns his mother and the man he called father, ignorant, uneducated, and free given, he drags himself ashore, hides in the friendly darkness of a covered truck—only to be killed out of all dawn—the mist of a tough east of river boy who beat and second hand clothing store. He then enters a new life on the Bowery in New York. John and Becca visit Central Park where John sees many strange and new sights. They are caught in a storm, and have to spend the night in a shanty. The next day he is rescued and taken into the home of a Jewish family living in the rear of their second hand clothing store. He works in the sweatshop store and is openly courted by Becca, the daughter. The scene shifts to the home of the wealthy Van Horns, on his Ave., where lives the bachelor, Gilbert Van Horn, in whose life there is a sudden change. That change is an affair with his mother's maid, who left the house when he was accused. John Brown, fifteen as a fighter grows, and he is matched in an important fight with Rasper. As they aligned Sol Berford, holding John by the arm, passed the door of the club and entered the fighter's dressing room. It was crowded and a mass of talk and smoke greeted them. John had learned that he need only fight one opponent at a time, and he knew that leather gloves were not damaging than brass knuckles. His point of view was typical of his experience. Generally he got five dollars for a fight, not an inconsiderable amount, and here he might as well be a champion.

"But you got to win, remember. If John, you got to win to keep the big money." John and Sol were being pushed—a narrow aisle to the stage as Gilbert and the Judge took their seats, chatting with the Mackinacs. After smoke lifted in the air, drifting in the veil like uneasy banners, of mist. A hum of talk arose between the two. It was a time of hard heroic fighting. A hush fell over the hall as the announcer appeared. John had been cleared—a name of a million, three little-ones, terribly close together, in pairs, seemed to be boring at him from all sides of an endless void.

Immediately about him, under streaming light, was stark reality. "The next bout, gentlemen, an' I know it will be a bout"—there was a slight pause filled with moon and stars—"is between"—and the stout man under the spotlight in the center of the ring brought a piece of paper closer to his breast. Between Rasper and John, he waved his hand toward a corner of the arena, where a man in a blue suit, a thick youth rose to the introduction, grinning at the crowd, "known as the Polak Wonder," and "his other name, noticed occasionally," John Brown—"and Fighting Lipitch."

The fighters had their bandages examined. The gloves were adjusted. The stools were pulled from the corners. All but the referee left the ring. The fighters shook hands. The crowd roared. They were off, shuffling above the red velvet canvas. The cold white light pelted down on them. Their bodies glinted, like steel specimens on some master operating table. The call of the crowd rose more violent than ever. The Polak Wonder was picked to win. One of "Kill the white-rashers, kye!" Knock his block off! But him! Up! Mix 'er! Kill him! Interspersed with oaths, greeted the sense of John, reeling backward from a hard blow on the nose. The warm, salty blood trickling over his lips, sucking into his mouth, his nose—will—un-governable rage. Dancing before his narrowed eyes was saw the thing he was after, a red fighter who, like the red man, epitomized the enmity of man.

During the first minute of the round, as the fighters, by their actions, revealed a lack of science, many of the audience turned their backs to the ring, preferring to discuss matters of greater interest while waiting the main event of the evening, a much touted bout between third-rate heavies. But, as Rasper drew blood, and the fighting kye showed spunk, the fans, alert on the instant, turned back to the ring. The tiered seats and gallery bent over, glued to their chairs and benches. The mephitic air, heavy with stale tobacco and foul with the fumes of whiskey breath, vibrated under the impact of light fighting gloves pummeling human flesh.

The Rasper landed again and again, then John, seeing an opening, drove his hard right to the chin and laid bare the lower teeth of the Polak. Dark blood oozed from the cut lip in a sluggish stream. A quick left to the jaw, partly blocked by the Rasper, spat blood from both fighters, the song sounded the end of the round. Cheers rose from the ringside, cat calls and boos mingled with the din. The stamping of feet and the deaf and moaning that lifted above the crowd attested their approval. They were getting blood and action for their money. Stroke was shoved into the ring and the Rasper was rushed to his corner. A towel taster, gulping large mouthfuls of water from a bottle, sprayed the contents over the face and body of his man, while two others massaged his arms and legs, and advisors from the dressing room whispered breathless instructions for the continuation of the battle. But were being laid on their man, and perhaps fans about of encouragement. "Ya got him, Rasper. Kill him in the next! He's white—he's! Plug his wind! Look out for his right! He's a cut—crack down!"

Fighting Lipitch also had his adherents. Men yelled and howled as he went to his corner where Manager Sol, and a boy, worked over him in clumsy fashion. Sol Berford had failed to provide his man with proper bandages. John wiped his face on a towel and gulped from a bottle of water. Then he sat back on his stool, his arms resting on the lower ropes of the ring. He was written this artificial aid for quick recuperation accorded his opponent. As a matter of course, from the excited crowd, brought to a close by the ringing of the song for the second round.

The apertured, Rasper ducked and dodged in a waltzing game to wind and tire his opponent. Hoots and howls of rage greeted these unpolished gymnastics. "The Polak's stallion!" some one shouted, and an empty flask whirled at him, missed, and crashed into the spectators. In the opposite ring-side area, a great cheer for John swept through the crowd as his right fist again smashed against the jaw of the dodging Rasper with the hard sharp thud of a perfect blow, rocking his man, for an instant, against the ropes. John responded to the change of sentiment with a burst of speed, landing right and left against the body in quick succession and jumping chest of a furious counter blow. Purple blotches rose under the impact of his fists. Then, after a running blow, a sharp hook to the wind ended the round.

The Rasper staggered to his corner, a look of doubt crossing his battered face. John felt once his stool, his nose aching, a thick trickle of gore smearing down his throat and over his hearing chest. A faint smile from the trainer, two boys from the Samson Club elbowed Sol and his assistant out of the corner, stripped off their coats, and began rubbing and blowing water under direction of Pug Malone. A third man swung a towel alternately from his shoulders, fanning air into John's face. They rubbed and kneaded his legs, for fighters tire there first. "Play for the third," was the advice of Malone, "don't stop—mind your guard," and the third round was called with the sudden changing of the gong.

"Some are natural fighters, some are not," was the opinion of Pug Malone. He was expounding his views in the dressing room of the Samson Sporting Club, after the fight. "They and naturally know how to fight, to put a man into a punch, an' kick, when it lands. Why, dammit, ninety-nine out of a hundred hit like windmills. Now, that kid—Breen's name, not Lipitch, he's no kye—that kid's a born natural fighter." The Jorga-Lipitch fight, ending by a clean knockout in the middle of the sixth round, after a skillful fight from start to the crowd, ten, completely overshadowed the main event, in which the mixed-up pugilists, "Red Herring" Hennessy and Jeff Keegan, floundered about in clumsy buffeting while the crowd divided in disgust.

Malone, in the dressing room with the fighters, saw Sol Berford also count out three five dollar bills and offer them to John. They were standing in a corner, partly shielded by a locker.

"What's that?" Malone demanded sharply, approaching the boy and his manager.

"What I won. I got fifteen and Sol gets ten; he's my manager," John explained.

"Say you dirty crook!" The trainer glared at Sol, blanched to a deathly pallor at the discovery of his duplicity. "You give that boy his money." Malone, with a sudden grip, pulled the retreating Berford backward. "Dig, damn you—dig!" and he drove his elbow sharply into the middle of Sol's soft back. Breen, wincing with pain, hesitated. John eyed him with suspicion. "Dig you rotten crook," and Pug Malone gave him a second and much harder blow in the back as a crisp fifty dollar bill came to light. Malone snatched this and handed it to John. "Take that, son, you got your own 'an' fade fast, before you get what's comin' to you." Berford took the hint without delay.

"What's your name, son?" Malone asked. "You look white." "Breen, sir, John Breen," the air slipping from some dormant cell, recorded, perhaps, while overhearing Captain Breen address some "wart or ship officer." Malone, compact, grey haired, and pink, looked like a god to the boy. "Where do you work?" Malone knew that John was not a professional.

"With Mr. Lipitch in the Clothing Emporium."

"Try?" demanded Malone.

"Yes, sir, he pays me." John felt his benefactor was under criticism.

"Not course he does, son. How much? What do you get at a week?"

"Three dollars—and home," John added, by way of good measure.

"Board?" Malone asked.

"Board—rats!" And then, seeing the alarmed look on John's face, he went on in a kindly tone. "What you need is feeding. Better stay here, I'll give you a job, five a week and real board, Rabbin', that's the work, an' I'll train you, son, an' split right. Are you my boy?" And so John Breen left the Objects to enter the Bowery of the Greater City of New York.

WINTER EGG PRODUCTION

There are many things that influence winter egg production besides the actual feeding, housing, and handling of the stock at the time of production.

The proper breeding, hatching, brooding, and rearing, all to a very large extent influence the production of the pullets in after life, so that to obtain the most efficient product the breeding and early surroundings of the pullets should be good. Given well matured pullets of the proper type, success is assured if ordinary good attention to details is given.

The house should be bright, dry, cool, ventilated, but free from draughts.

The system of feeding followed at the Central Experimental Farm, Ontario, with very good results, is set out herewith. A laying mash is kept in hoppers before the flock at all times, also hoppers of grit, oyster shell and charcoal. Fresh water is also continuously supplied as well as milk when available.

At the first feed of the mixed scratch grain is fed in the litter. For green feed, well cured alfalfa hay is fed in racks and is supplemented with alfalfa mangels or other roots. Where table scraps are available, a moist mash is fed at noon and a full feed of scratch grain is given in the evening.

The scratch grain used is either one of the recognized commercial mixtures, or one mixed on the place, made up of wheat, oats or oat groats barley and cracked corn with small percentages of buckwheat or any other grain that may be available.

The mash mixture is bran one half part, alfalfa leaf meal one half part, middlings, ground yellow meal and finally ground oats, each one part, animal feed mixture one half part, salt, one per cent, bone meal three per cent, and cod liver oil three per cent.

Where home grown grains are available they may be used to replace the purchased feed. Finely ground wheat replacing the bran and middlings and barley the corn in whole or in part.

Where no milk is available and heavy egg production is desired the animal feed mixture in the mash may be increased.

The animal feed used is a mixture of ground meat scrap, fish meal and milk powder; these are usually used equal parts but their quantities are regulated by the prices of the various feeds.

With a flock of well bred, vigorous, well grown pullets, proper handled and fed as above, satisfactory returns are assured.

The meaning of a word in Chinese is indicated by the musical tone in which it is uttered. One word may have as many as five different tones each of which, when sounded, gives the word an entirely different meaning.

Light Conversation

The story goes that Babe Ruth once met General Foch.

"I've never met any of these big birds," he told his partner. "What am I going to say to him?"

"Just shake hands with him and ask about anything you happen to think of," he was advised.

So the Babe, impressed by Foch's fine uniform and military bearing, greeted him respectfully.

"Was you," asked the Babe, by way of making light conversation, "in the war?"

Some Difference

Little Willie says he would rather hear a cow than a saxophone, because, although they both make the same noise, a cow gives milk.

THE PICTURES

PEGGY SHANNON, Auburn-haired beauty from Arkansas (via the Folies in New York) who made good in the film when she was pressed into service as Clara Bow's substitute in "The Secret Call," has the principal feminine lead in "Touchdown," coming to the Orpheum on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, Sept. 16, 17, and 18.

In "Touchdown" she is the sweetheart of Richard Arlen (again). This time Arlen is the coach for Midwell, a large college, where football is played on a big scale in stadiums that hold scores of thousands of persons. Peggy's brother, played by Charles Starrett, is a member of the Midwell team and the big interest comes when Arlen refrains from putting Starrett into the final game of the season to save him from permanent injury.

Peggy, not knowing that Starrett has been slightly injured in the game, is much aggrieved and decides to throw Arlen. But their difficulties are solved in a romantic, happy ending.

"Lascia di Rio Grande," Universal's straight-shooting, half-blooded romance of the Mexican border, makes its debut at the Orpheum Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, Sept. 16, 17, and 18, as the other half of the double feature program.

Leo Carrillo, John Mack Brown, Dorothy Burgess, and Slim Sumnerville are in its principal roles.

Based on the Frank Desprez poem, "Lascia," the story concerns a dark-eyed senorita of the dance halls, a tenderly murderous half-breed cattle owner who likes his women beautiful, and a handsome Texas Ranger in love.

The picture is packed to the brim with hard-riding, belting guns, filling Spanish melodies, and romantic scenes, and is a photographic classic, according to reports. There is a thrilling cattle stampede, a roving gun-fight between the half-breed's note too careful sharpshooters and the rangers, and some of the season's choicest comedy, furnished by Slim Sumnerville and Frank Campeau.

"Daughter of the Dragon," is coming next week, starring Anna May Wong, Warner Oland, and Sam Haysawa.
